

A Genetic Study of the Khyntiam of Meghalaya, North-East India

R. Khongsdier and R. Lama

Department of Anthropology, North-Eastern Hill University, Mayurbhanj Complex, Nongthymmai, Shillong 793 014, Meghalaya, India

KEYWORDS Khyntiam Khasi. Population Subdivisions. Genetic Markers. Meghalaya

ABSTRACT The present note is based on limited genetic markers and mating patterns among the Khyntiam, one of the Khasi sub-groups of Meghalaya, North-East India. It indicates that the Khasi population is not a homogenous one and it is likely that this population is divided into several endogamous units.