

Status and Role of Women in Bhil-Gameti (Scheduled Tribe)
Dangi (Scheduled Caste) and Banjare (Other Backward Class) of Badgaon Block District Udaipur, Rajasthan

Rosy Anita Kerketta and K. K. N. Sharma

Department of Anthropology, Dr. H. S.Gour University, Sagar 470 003, Madhya Pradesh, India

KEYWORDS Bhil-Gameti; Dangi; Banjare; women, role; status; family; society

ABSTRACT Special places and respect is being given to a woman of our society. And she enjoys different status in various communities of a society. Now for their better upliftment, our constitution of India has offered them 33% reservation. But the question arises whether, a women is getting equal status in different sections of a society. Keeping all this in views, the present study has been carried out among the Bhil- Gamti Scheduled Tribe, Dangi Scheduled Caste and Banjare other Backward class of Udaipur District of Rajasthan so as to a comparative study of the status of women among the three different section of the same area and also to study the impact of women reservation on them. The data is based on randomly selected 46 Bhil-Gamti, 10 Banjere and 28 Dangi household women from villages Sabalpura, Pratappura, Nimachkhera and Sapatiya of Badgon Blocks of the same District. The concerning data were collected with the help of Schedule and interview. The findings will be discussed.