

© Kamla-Raj 2007

Anthropologist Special Issue No. 3: 123-128 (2007)

Using Tribal Researchers: A Vital and Necessary Development

R. E. S. Tanner

KEYWORDS Data Accumulation. Potential Informants. Affiliation to University

ABSTRACT There is an urgent need to organise an on-going system of collecting data from rapidly changing tribal societies in order to create banks of information which can be used latter for yet unknown research purposes. It should be possible to do this by using the core of clever tribal people working independently of academic researchers and without the need for high standards of formal education or expensive subsidies.